PART 1

Camp Ramsey's Bush

THE BEGINNING

An article published in the Sydney "Sunday Times" of 28 June 1908, concerning the Hero of Mafeking, Colonel Robert Baden-Powell and his youth movement the Boy Scouts, created interest among the boys of Sydney Scout Patrols led by boys sprang up. By the end of 1908 the newly formed "League of Boy Scouts" had eleven registered troops. 1st City, 1st Cleveland Street School, 1st Glebe, 1st Hurstville, 1st Leichhardt, 1st Mosman, 1st Neutral Bay, 1st Petersham, 1st Redfern, 1st Toongabbie and 1st Woollahra. (Paddington added in 1911)

Hurstville, Leichhardt, Petersham and Woollahra are still in existence.

1ST LEICHHARDT

The 1st Leichhardt Kangaroo Patrol was formed in August 1908, by some boys of the suburb, led by Alec McMillen aged about 16 years. He was the first Patrol Leader, the Headquarters an old shed in James St., rented weekly for two shillings and sixpence.

In December 1908, J X COUTTS one Sunday afternoon encountered a number of boys camping out in a bush hut of their own construction. With them was their first Scoutmaster Mr A J Biddles. This camp was at "RAMSEY'S BUSH" now the suburb of Haberfield.

At the end of 1908 the troop moved to a new club room in Norton St., rented at four shillings weekly. Only remaining their until Jan. 1911.

The Sydney of 1909 was an ideal city of scouting; there was plenty of bushland close to every suburb. The boys of this generation know not radio, television, aeroplanes or moving pictures, cars were only just making their appearance and boys still went to bend in the old night shirt.

J X Coutts joined in April and became leader of the Wallaroo Senior Patrol.

In June, the newly formed Newcastle patrol came on a visit to Sydney, they stayed at Leichhardt with SM Biddles. They also attended the first concert for Boy Scouts at the Sydney Town Hall on 7th June.

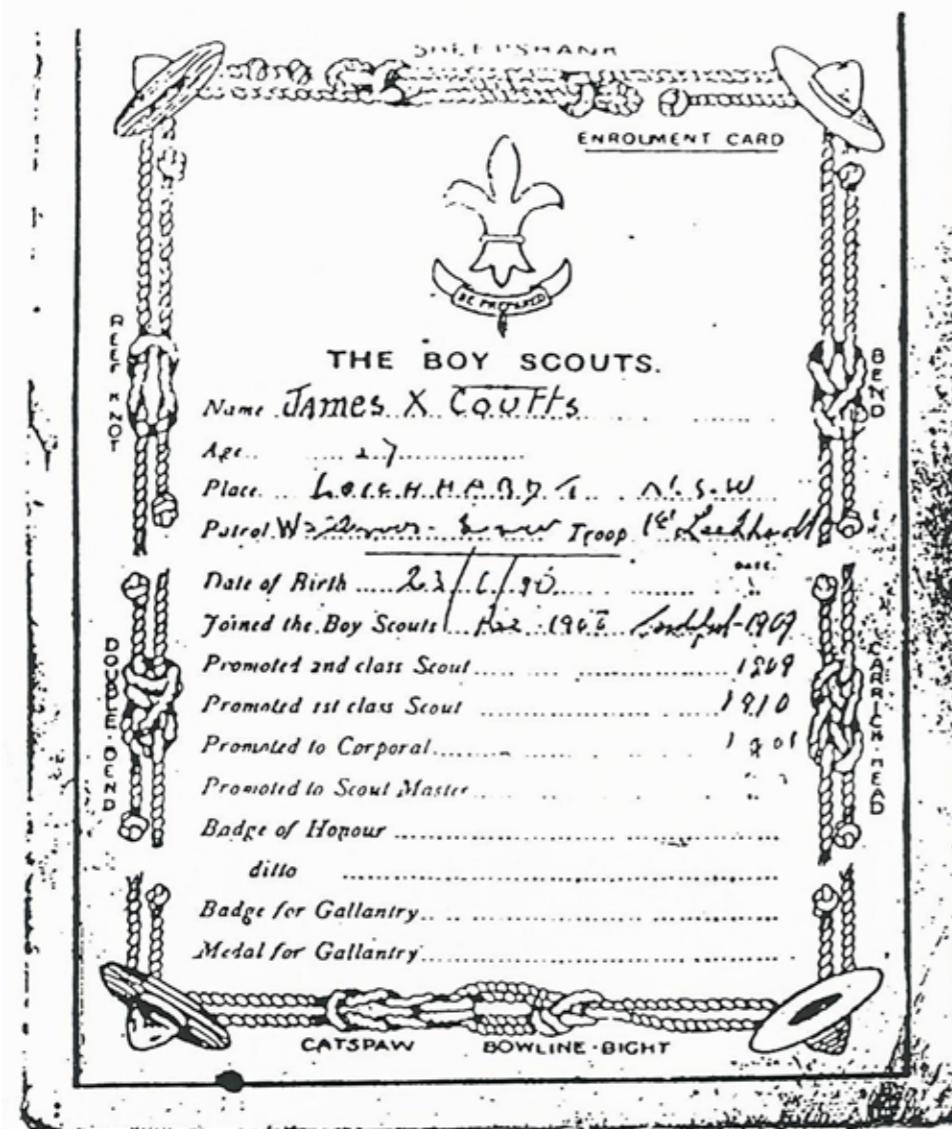

King Edward VII had taken a great interest in the Movement, and to show his appreciation of what had been done, General Baden-Powell was elevated to Knighthood during October.

This year saw the introduction of the Second Class and the first eight Proficiency badges. It was a wonderful day for the troop when the first badges were presented at Lyne Park, Rose Bay on 15th November by the Governor Sir H Rawson.

Badges were presented to:-

1910

The decision by the Commonwealth Government to introduce compulsory cadet training in 1910 for all boys over twelve years of age, had a crippling effect on the infant Boy Scout Movement. Overnight, it became difficult to predict the future of Scouting.

Some Troops folded entirely while others dwindled to mere Patrols. Administrators of the League of Boy Scouts called a special meeting to discuss the crisis; some favoured disbandment, others held a more optimistic viewpoint. The motion to carry on which kept the movement alive at this critical stage, was moved by Mr J X COUTTS, speaking in public for the first time.

King Edward VII, gave his assent to the King's Scout Badge. The King died in May and Scouts greatly mourned his demise, for Edward VII was the King who gave the Movement Royal Patronage.

1st Leichhardt in 1910, took part in a despatch-carrying contest from Sydney to Bathurst. Leichhardt Scouts had to cover many miles and finally had to swim the Nepean River at Penrith.

The League of Boy Scouts appointed James X Coutts, Assistant Scoutmaster of 1st Leichhardt 26 March 1910.

The second Australian Award of the Silver Wolf was gazetted on the 5th June, to A McMillen who gained our first King Scout Badge.

1911

J X Coutts appointed Scoutmaster, 1st Leichhardt, No 10 District 6 Division NSW Section, on the resignation of SM Biddles.

The Troop moved to Renwick Lane off Norton St., in Feb. the rent two Shillings and six pence weekly. It was decided to form a branch troop at Lilyfield to be known as West Leichhardt, but keeping the same officers for both Troops.

August saw a Special Appointment SM Coutts to Senior Scoutmaster.

An event that happened in 1911, and worthy of mention was the hike held by 1st Leichhardt from Como to Wollongong. It was the first one on a big scale, with about 30 boys taking part. Most of the newspapers had their reporters waiting for the scouts at every little village en route, sending Press Telegrams, which were duly printed next day showing the progress of the scouts. At Clifton, the local area officer, thinking they were a new type of soldier, invited the oldest boys into the local pub for a spot, but naturally they declined.

It seems amusing to recall the method adopted for carrying kit. Each boy procured a sugar bag, loaded his gear into it, and carried it on his back. Rucksacks were unknown.

A Mounted Patrol was formed under Les Andrews, and was to escort BP on his visit the following year.

1st Mosman were deregistered in 1911, for continuing to wear their white jerseys against the orders of headquarters and were not admitted again until the end of 1912, when they adopted shirts. This was a questionable want of tact on the part of someone, especially as another Troop 1st Glebe continued to wear jerseys until 1920.

The event which all Boy Scouts had looked forward to ever since the formation of the Movement at last took place ----- the meeting with their Chief Scout, Sir Robert S.S. Baden-Powell, C.B., K.C. V.O.

BP arrived in Sydney in May 1912, the Scout Bugle Band sounded the General Salute as BP stepped from the train. He then inspected the Guard of Honour of 120 picked Boy Scouts, all with staves and haversack on back.

The Chief then pass on to the Governor's State carriage where the mounted Boy Scout escort under Les Andrews led the procession along George St., to Sydney Town Hall. Every boy in the escort was a good rider and mounted a good horse.

The show our Chief that we could appreciate the natural scouting country surrounding the city of Sydney, and to demonstrate that the out of door activities were not being overlooked, a bush camp was held for the weekend. The spot chosen was the hill to the south of Cook's River where Undercliffe is now a populous suburb. J Coutts met BP on this occasion.

While in Sydney BP met the forerunners of the Girl Guides, some 800 city and 150 country "Girl Aids" attended a gathering to meet the Chief.

[Promotion of Mr Coutts to District Scoutmaster on 1st September 1912]

"The district camp in 1912 was an even more exciting one. At that time there was an organisation known as the St George Boys Brigade. There members were armed with rifles and bayonets of French Army pattern, and on this occasion were camped next to West Sydney District.

The Boys Brigade attacked the Scout Camp, and the skirmish resulted in the Scouts capturing 30 prisoners, who were detained under guard in a tent for the rest of the night. In the morning the POWs were escorted back to their Brigade HQ, preceded by the Scout Bugle Band."

Following the Chiefs visit, it was decided to work to the English PO&R., and HQ set about forming The Boy Scouts Association of New South Wales, which would replace the League.
